The local medical profession is much surprised at the seemingly complete recovery of John Shanley from an illness of many months, when he was given up by his physicians and told he must die. The trouble seemed to be cancer of the stomach and an operation was to be performed for its removal. His stomach was cut open and the cancer (?) found to be so large and hard that it could not be cut without endangering his life, so his stomach was sewed up and he went home to die. Instead, the tube, that had been left in to drain the wound, seemed to aid in his recovery and the tumor soon began to grow less and less, until it finally disappeared. In April, Mr. Shanley went back to work, feeling quite well, and has been working ever since, until now he says he never felt better in his life. The physicians now think the tumor was of tuberculous growth and cured by the action of the air, which reached the stomach through the operation and the tube inserted at the time.

SMALL FORTUNES IN TREES.

Hints to Farmers Who Are Prone to Cut Up Fine Logs for Fuel.

Today there are comparatively few planter farms which must be cleared out of the forest, but there are many which still possess enough timber for fuel cutting and for commercial uses on a limited scale. In the light of recent warnings as to the menace of a scarcity of timber in the future, farmers need not be admonished to avoid useless waste of trees. The average farmer does most of his tree cutting in the winter when he has time to do when the nonfarming season was on. The hired man spoke gospel truth, as every farmer knows. But there are ways of making the work easier, winter as well as summer. Some farmers do many things in a haphazard, slipshod way, just as their ancestors used to do them, and never take the trouble to think up more modern methods. By this neglect they cause themselves much extra work.

A certain farmer in Indiana whose neighbors mix feed for the stock in the old laborious way, simply pouring water from a bucket into the mixture and stirring it, has contrived a very simple but handy arrangement for mixing feed. He found an old flat box which had been used years before for mixing mortar when the farmhouse was rebuilt. Bains of several seasons had washed out all vestiges of clinging lime. From the well in his back yard he ran a flame of two inch wooden pipe which had been used formerly for draining a marshy place. With his boy pumping at the well the farmer has a constant stream of water flowing into his mixing box while he stirs the feedstuffs. Into a sack near at hand goes the mixed and moistened feed, ready to serve, and this Indiana man says the cows surely do like it put up that way.

The Beautiful Acacias.
The Australian acacias, or watties, as they are popularly called, form a valuable group of plants for greenhouse decoration during winter and spring, while for the mild districts of the south they are excellent for outdoor culture.

When grown for the conservatory or greenhouse they are usually placed in pots or tubs, but where space can be afforded in winter gardens and similar structures they are first rate subjects for planting in borders. Planted in this manner, they grow rapidly into large bushes and flower profusely. One objection may be raised in planting acacias in borders, for in the event of a specimen getting too large for its position it cannot be successfully transplanted without going to a great deal of trouble, for few shrubs or trees are more difficult to establish after serious root disturbance. By an annual pruning from the earliest years of a plant's life, however, it may be kept within bounds with little difficulty, while the selection of varieties of moderate growth is a point to consider. Although acacias will stand a very severe annual pruning it is unwise to cut them back to old wood, for they break away again satisfactorily.

It is a remarkable fact that in spite of the opening out of the country by railways and roads and the clearing of jungle tracts the number of persons killed by wild animals in British India does not show any decrease. In fact, last year the figures rose to 2,100, an actual increase of 200.

Jacques Lebaudy, better known as the "emperor of the Sahara," has written a play called "The Heart of the Sahara Desert" and is to act in it himself.
